

In science, we have been learning how to classify living things. We used sweets to create our own classification keys, creating questions to split the groups until they were in their own, unique group! We then independently classified birds or butterflies!

